The bill as expounded by Mr. Morley, if not moderate, is more moderate than was expected, more moderate than the Irish Nationalists wish, and more moderate than the Unionists feared. Mr. Morley himself said that the proposals of the Government could not be fairly judged till the bill had been studied in print. They are nevertheless judged at once, roughly and necessarily True, Mr. Balfour, whose voice is the only really authoritative one on his side of the House, refrained from what he called a decisive opinion. He is himself in favor of doing something to close an open wound. He does not wish to commit himself to a wholesale opposition to a scheme which, even from a Unionist point of view, may contain healing elements, or the material for a ttlement of a controversy which makes peacimpossible in Ireland and prosperity uncertain.

legislators spoke more freely. All parties in the House had their say. The Parnellites led off in the person of Mr. Harrington, with a fierce denunciation of the scheme. Mr. Russell, for the Irish Unionists, half blessed and more than half cursed the bill, especially the use of Church Colonel Saunderson, who takes individual views, announced that this was a device of the Ministry for whitewashing the Plan of Campaign and its authors. The anti-Parnellites or McCarthyltesthey are really much in need of a convenient satisfied as Irish patriots ever expect to be with an English bill. The origin of the bill is not, in truth, entirely English. Messrs, Sexton and Dil-Ion were taken into council, and the bill represents in a measure their views, as well as Mr. Morley's. Their approval was secured before-

I can but refer in the briefest way to sundry topics which deserve fuller treatment. Lord Salisbury's speech to the Primrose League is remarkable for his declaration, apparently meant to be final, in favor of continuing the hereditary principle in the House of Lords. He is for "judiclous reform," meaning more life peers, but excluding the "elective element." That is a declaration of very considerable importance, and likely to obstruct reform and favor abolition.

That "new spirit" of tolerance, moderation and compromise, which M. Spuller announced not long ago, has not sufficed to prevent a fresh conflict between Church and State in France. The conflict is not as yet a very large one, but it is a conflict of the kind which often arose when the old splitt prevailed. A law was passed last session requiring Church accounts to be audited by the prefects. The Archbishop of Lyons issued a pastoral directing the church councils in his diocese to disobey the law. The Cabinet thereupon suspended the Archbishop's salary, and the Council of State is to be asked to annul the pastoral. M. Spuller, within whose jurisdiction as Minister of Public Instruction and Worship these matters fall, thinks himself obliged to request all Bishops to send their pastorals dealing with this subject to him. Probably not all of them

Two more theatrical failures have to be recorded, "Once Upon a Time" has lasted but a fortnight at the Haymarket. The novelty of the theme and treatment could not save it, nor the Mrs. Tree's girlish charm. To the London playgoer these are as naught without a plot he can interest himself in, and enough semblance of verisimilitude to make an appeal to his sympathies. These the play lacked, and it will be performed for the last time to-night; to be succeeded on Wednesday by Mr. Sydney Grundy's "A Bunch of Violets.

Still less surprising is the early demise of the melancholy "Mrs. Lessingham" at the Garrick Theatre; a play devoid of probable or conceivable motive, and so depressing that one felt like going to a funeral afterward to cheer one's self up. MRS. "BOB" HILLIARD GETS A DIVORCE. R.H. MACY &CO.

JUDGE GILDERSLEEVE GRANTS HER AN ABSO-LUTE DECREE FROM HER HUSBAND, THE

WELL-KNOWN ACTOR. Cora Bell Hilliard obtained from Judge Gildersiceve, of the Superior Court, yesterday a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, Robert Cochran Hilliard, the actor. The case has been conducted for several months with great secreey, and there was an air of mystery in the court yesterday when the papers were presented to Judge Gildersleeve for signature, "Bob" Hilliard was present accompanied by his counsel, General Martin T McMahon. His wife was represented by A. H Hummel.

The decree is based upon the testimony taken before Edward Jacobs, as referee, and his report rec ommending also that to Mrs. Hilliard be awarded ommending also that to be defined the custody of their only child, Robert Bell Hilliard, twelve years old. The papers were at once sealed and filed by the clerk, so that the name of the woman who figures in the case is not at present disclosed, although, as she is a married woman, another divorce suit is likely soon to follow.

Hilliard is now playing in "The Sleepwalker" at the Bijou. About thirteen years ago, when he married Cora Bell, he was a member of the Amaranth, the well-known social society of Brooklyn. Miss Bell was a member of the same society, and she and Hilliard frequently appeared on the amateur stage together. Hilliard and his wife lived together until about last December, when Mrs. Hilliard found out certain facts which induced her to bring this suit for divorce. The decree awards Mrs. Hilliard alimony of $25 a week, and allows the father permission to see his son at all reasonable times. The son is also to be allowed to see his grandmother, the mother of the actor, during two weeks of the summer each year. the custody of their only child, Robert Bell Hill-

JOHN KELLY'S EXPERIENCES ABROAD.

Mr. Kelly has no enemies. His amiability is unwearied and inexhaustible, his good nature never fails, his kindness of heart, sympathy and friendship are amazing. He is always a conciliator, a reconciler and a peacemaker. The number of differences which has adjusted, of quarrels which he has composed, of wounds which he has healed, of adversaries whom he has made friends, of lions an lambs which he has persuaded to lie down to gether is wonderful, almost incredible. Kelly is a natural diplomatist of the best type, diplomatist who seeks always to secure peace and harmony. He will take any amount of time and trouble to serve a friend, will make any sacrifice of his own effort, convenience and comfort for the benefit and advantage of his friends, the number of whom is prodigious.

Mr. Kelly is a man of exceptional acuteness, ability, shrewdness and segacity. Good judgment, intelligence and common sense inspire his utterances and his advice. He always gives good council with the suggestions are asked from ...im. Mr. Kelly used all his energies in efforts to settle the quarrets on the turf last summer. If Mr. Kelly's advice had been taken then it is probable that the racetracks of New-J racy would be open this year. If his advice had been taken losses of many hundreds of thousands of dollars to owners of racetracks, owners of horses and owners of breeding farms would have been avoided.

Mr. Kelly has been a sufferer from neuralcla for several years, and has taken long journeys in the hope of improving his health.
